Dear Caroline

Thank you again for taking the time to meet Andrew & I yesterday. It was a pleasure to learn more about Headington Rye's international ambitions and discuss how British Enrolment Partners can support your student recruitment objectives.

Our retainer model is designed to provide schools with access to an extensive network of carefully selected international education agencies across multiple markets, without the need to invest significant time and resources into developing and managing those relationships internally. We act as an extension of your admissions and international recruitment team, proactively introducing your school to quality vetted partners and identifying new recruitment opportunities throughout the year. One of the key benefits of our approach is its flexibility. Every school has different priorities, target markets and capacity, so we tailor our support accordingly and work alongside your existing recruitment activity to complement and strengthen it. The markets of Turkey & South America align extremely well with our coverage, and I hope that we can work together on helping you to recruit from these and other regions.

I would be delighted to arrange another meeting at your convenience to answer any further questions and discuss how we can best support Headington Rye's international recruitment strategy. I am confident that our extensive agency network and collaborative approach can provide meaningful opportunities to help grow enrolment.

Thank you once again for your time and consideration. I look forward to speaking with you again soon.

Kindest regards

John

Dear John,

Perfect, yes do come to Reception and I will meet you there. You are most welcome to park on site (there is plenty of parking): we ask that you enter the school grounds via the Headley Way entrance of the school and bear immediately left. Visitor parking is available towards the front of the school and you can park in the semi circle if no spaces are available, though as it is the school holidays, I don't expect there to be an issue with space. Reception can be found through the central main doors and they will be expecting you.

Best wishes,
Caroline

Hi Caroline,

Hope all's well and apologies for the slight delay in coming back to you.

It would be great to come and see you and ideally for John and Ying to come along too, to tell you more about BEP and that initial agency audit which lots of schools we've reached out to are really interested in.

Do you have any preferred time windows?

Best wishes,

Andrew

Dear Andrew,

Thank you and it's great to e-meet you. I would be happy to chat: I actually work year-round and do come into the office over the holidays, so if you are around over the summer, it's actually a quieter time in Admissions. Do let me know and I'd be happy to make a plan.

Best wishes,
Caroline

Hey Caroline,

Great to connect and thanks to George for the intro.

I work in brand and growth across the sector and I think the BEP concept has great potential for some schools and contexts but it very much depends on internal resource and agency network/coverage at present.

I'm currently connecting with a few top schools where I have connections to share some more about BEP for the team and to offer the initial agent coverage and performance audits which are free and a helpful exercise for boards and governors in themselves.

If you'd like an intro chat, Caroline that would be great. I'd love to connect. Given the time of year I won't offer to pop in until next term as I live locally.

Best wishes,

Andrew

Dear Caroline and Andrew

I am writing to e-introduce you to each other.

Caroline - Andrew is a personal friend. He lives locally in Horspath and has worked in the international school sector for many years.

He is now the business development lead of a new international recruitment service that manages boarding school enrolment: British Enrolment Partners (BEP).

Andrew - Caroline is our International Admissions Coordinator at Headington. She has been with us since the start of this academic year and (IMHO) doing an excellent job.

You two may be able to find some useful cross-over in your roles. This email is primary driven, however, by the email sent through by Andrew this morning (copied below).

I will leave it to you both to liaise from here.

Thx,

G

Dear George,

I hope you and the team have come through this difficult week in reasonable shape. It's been pretty unbearable in Oxford!

As we near the end of term and the school year, I wanted to drop you a quick note about an international boarding recruitment project I'm now involved in - I appreciate you might not be the point man for this sort of thing, but I wanted to tell you a bit more should you be happy to share this email further within Headington.

I've been part of the thinking and positioning behind a new venture that I believe could change how schools approach international recruitment, and how much they get out of their agency networks.

I don't need to tell you how competitive and prized that part of your community has become. Schools across the country are telling me their pipelines have gone sticky, and that converting the agency leads they're handed is harder than it used to be. Nobody's pretending it's easy out there.

Which is why I think there's room for a challenger in international recruitment, in the same way we've seen other core parts of running a school, catering being the obvious one, professionalised and brought into integrated outsourcing.

To cut to the chase: British Enrolment Partners (BEP) launched quietly this week and will run the international enrolment function for a handpicked group of British boarding schools. The markets, the agents, the applications and the in-territory work, handled as one coordinated operation rather than a scatter of separate relationships.

It's worth saying who's behind it. Ying, BEP's Founder and CEO, brings a global network of agents and offices across Europe, Asia and LATAM, and is a successful boarding school proprietor in their own right. John, Head of Partnerships, is an experienced international pupil and agency recruiter who knows this side of the work inside out.

The tagline is "your always-on international enrolment office". The line that matters more is this: the model is built to bring down the cost of running your international recruitment function while guaranteeing a wider pool of right-fit agents and new enquiries. In practice the aim is to do both at once, trimming what you currently spend on international recruitment while widening the enquiries coming in, with the combined effect running well into six figures in your favour across a year.

Sounds too good to be true? I'd want proof too. Which is why BEP starts with a no-cost, no-obligation audit of your current international coverage: your agents, your process and where your pupils are coming from, set against the markets and pupil profile you want. It's carried out under an NDA, with a written undertaking not to approach or work around any agent it sees. It's diagnostic, so where your setup is already strong, they'll tell you.

I've attached the Founding School Partner prospectus, which should answer a good deal up front, but the best next step would be a short call between your team and the BEP team.

BEP isn't interested in schools chasing numbers for their own sake. It wants schools that are confident in who they are and what they offer, but recognise that, for whatever reason, that strength isn't translating into the international boarding numbers it should. The idea is simple: BEP plays to its enrolment strengths so you can focus on yours.

BEP will only work with a small number of schools this founding year, and we're onboarding the first now, with the focus on bedding the model in well before we add more. So there's something to be said for looking sooner rather than later.

If you'd like to line up the audit, or put any questions to us on a call or by email, just let me know. Even on its own it carries real strategic and commercial value for a board and leadership team, whatever you decide to do next.

Best wishes as always,

Andrew
