Dear Henry and Kara,

Thank you both for taking the time to meet Ying and I on Friday. It was a pleasure to learn more about Warwick Schools Foundation, its international student recruitment objectives and the opportunities you are looking to develop, as well as to give you a better understanding of BEP and how we could potentially support you.

I completely understand that you would like to have some internal discussions and take some time to consider whether BEP is the right fit for Warwick Schools Foundation. I just wanted to reiterate that we would be very interested in continuing discussions to explore opportunities further. Should you decide that you would like to progress with us, the next step from our side would be to prepare and forward a tailored proposal outlining how BEP could support your international recruitment objectives.

In the meantime, thank you again for your time and for the open and engaging discussion. I look forward to staying in touch and hopefully continuing the conversation.

Best wishes,
John

Hi Henry,

I hope you are well. It's been a while since we last spoke.

You may already be aware that British Enrolment Partners was founded by IQ Schools Group, the holding company of Adcote School and Myddelton College. I am sure you are familiar with our international recruitment network and capabilities.

I would be very happy to arrange a call with you this week to discuss how we may be able to support your international recruitment for the next academic year. I am quite flexible tomorrow and Friday morning, so please let me know what time works best for you.

Andrew is currently on holiday in Cornwall with limited mobile coverage, so he may not be able to join the call.

Best,
Ying

Subject: Maximising Warwick's international recruitment

Hey Zhihan,

Thanks so much for your LI message and interest in the project I'm working on.

As requested, I'm sharing some more info on an international boarding recruitment project I'm now involved in which I think is a strategic and commercial game changer for schools looking to increase market share in what we know is a tough market right now.

I don't need to tell you how competitive and prized that part of your community has become. Schools across the country are telling me their pipelines have gone sticky, and that converting the agency leads they're handed is harder than it used to be. Nobody's pretending it's easy out there.

Which is why I think there's room for a challenger in international recruitment, in the same way we've seen other core parts of running a school, catering being the obvious one, professionalised and brought into integrated outsourcing.

To cut to the chase: British Enrolment Partners (BEP) launched quietly this week and will run the international enrolment function for a handpicked group of British boarding schools. The markets, the agents, the applications and the in-territory work, handled as one coordinated operation rather than a scatter of separate relationships.

Re who's behind BEP, Ying, BEP's Founder and CEO, brings a global network of agents and offices across Europe, Asia and LATAM, and is a successful boarding school proprietor in her own right - recruiting over 1,000s of boarders over a decade in the sector. John, Head of Partnerships, is an experienced international pupil and agency recruiter who knows this side of the recruitment process inside out.

The tagline for BEP is "your always-on international enrolment office".

The line that matters more is this: the model is built to bring down the cost of running your international recruitment function while guaranteeing a wider pool of right-fit agents and new enquiries. In practice the aim is to do both at once, trimming what you currently spend on international recruitment while widening the enquiries coming in, with the combined effect running well into six figures in your favour across a year.

Sounds too good to be true?

I'd want proof too.

Which is why BEP starts with a no-cost, no-obligation audit of your current international coverage: your agents, your process and where your pupils are coming from, set against the markets and pupil profile you want. It's carried out under an NDA, with a written undertaking not to approach or work around any agent it sees. It's diagnostic, so where your setup is already strong, they'll tell you.

I've attached the Founding School Partner prospectus, which should answer a good deal up front, but the best next step would be a short call between your team and the BEP team.

BEP isn't interested in schools chasing numbers for their own sake and they are being deliberately selective in the schools they are offering this partnership opportunity too.

It wants schools that are confident in who they are and what they offer, but recognise that, for whatever reason, that strength isn't translating into the international boarding numbers it should. The idea is simple: BEP plays to its enrolment strengths so you can focus on yours.

BEP will only work with a small number of schools this founding year, and we're onboarding the first now, with the focus on bedding the model in comprehensively and passing on learnings and benefits to those that buy into the concept as early adopters. So there's an extra reason to be looking at BEP sooner rather than later.

If you'd like to line up the audit, or put any questions to us on a call or by email, just let me know. Even on its own the international agency and recruitment audit carries real strategic and commercial value for a board and leadership team, whatever you decide to do next.

Best wishes,

Andrew
