Hi Natalie,

I just wanted to clarify that, within the proposal, I've aimed to demonstrate the breadth of BEP's reach across global regions, particularly given our discussion around opportunities to diversify nationalities within boarding. I also recognise your own background and planned recruitment activity in China & Hong Kong. With our regional recruitment team based on the ground in China, alongside colleagues managing agency networks across Hong Kong and East Asia, we can certainly offer strong expertise and coverage in these markets too.

I look forward to receiving your feedback once you've had a chance to consider the proposal. I'd be very pleased to have a follow-up conversation to answer any questions and discuss priorities.

Best wishes,

John

Dear John

Thanks so much for this and your time yesterday

It is an interesting product of which I can see quite obvious benefits, given my background of working in Chinese agency that feels a logical focus but I will confirm

Natalie

Hello Natalie

Thank you for taking the time to meet yesterday. It was a pleasure to learn more about Glenalmond College and to discuss British Enrolment Partners (BEP), as well as the opportunities for us to support your international student recruitment strategy.

I will follow up by forwarding a proposal outlining how BEP could support Glenalmond College and the potential opportunities for working together.

In the meantime, please do not hesitate to get in touch if you have any questions.

Thanks and very best wishes.

Kindest regards

John

Hello Natalie

I hope this email finds you well.

Thanks for confirming your availability to meet at 10:00am on Monday 10th August.

We are looking forward to the opportunity to introduce British Enrolment Partners (BEP) and learn about Glenalmond's international student recruitment objectives and priorities, and to explore how we may be able to support your future enrolment strategy.

Would it be possible to meet via Microsoft Teams? If that's convenient, I'll share a meeting invitation.

Kindest regards

John

Hey Natalie,

Thanks so much for your message tonight - great to see you in your new gig and be talking. You are right to suggest that it was not my only message of interest this evening or since I've been talking about this over the last few weeks...

I've been part of the thinking and positioning behind a new venture that I believe could change how schools approach international recruitment, and how much they get out of their agency networks.

I don't need to tell you how competitive and prized that part of your community has become. Schools across the country are telling me their pipelines have gone sticky, and that converting the agency leads they're handed is harder than it used to be. Nobody's pretending it's easy out there.

Which is why I think there's room for a challenger in international recruitment, in the same way we've seen other core parts of running a school, catering being the obvious one, professionalised and brought into integrated outsourcing.

To cut to the chase: British Enrolment Partners (BEP) launched quietly this week and will run the international enrolment function for a handpicked group of British boarding schools. The markets, the agents, the applications and the in-territory work, handled as one coordinated operation rather than a scatter of separate relationships.

It's worth saying who's behind it. Ying, BEP's Founder and CEO, brings a global network of agents and offices across Europe, Asia and LATAM, and is a successful boarding school proprietor in their own right. John, Head of Partnerships, is an experienced international pupil and agency recruiter who knows this side of the work inside out.

The tagline is "your always-on international enrolment office". The line that matters more is this: the model is built to bring down the cost of running your international recruitment function while guaranteeing a wider pool of right-fit agents and new enquiries. In practice the aim is to do both at once, trimming what you currently spend on international recruitment while widening the enquiries coming in, with the combined effect running well into six figures in your favour across a year.

Sounds too good to be true?

I'd want proof too.

Which is why BEP starts with a no-cost, no-obligation audit of your current international coverage: your agents, your process and where your pupils are coming from, set against the markets and pupil profile you want. It's carried out under an NDA, with a written undertaking not to approach or work around any agent it sees. It's diagnostic, so where your setup is already strong, they'll tell you.

I've attached the Founding School Partner prospectus, which should answer a good deal up front, but the best next step would be a short call between your team and the BEP team.

BEP isn't interested in schools chasing numbers for their own sake. It wants schools that are confident in who they are and what they offer, but recognise that, for whatever reason, that strength isn't translating into the international boarding numbers it should. The idea is simple: BEP plays to its enrolment strengths so you can focus on yours.

BEP will only work with a small number of schools this founding year, and we're onboarding the first now, with the focus on bedding the model in well before we add more. So there's something to be said for looking sooner rather than later.

If you'd like to line up the audit, or put any questions to us on a call or by email, just let me know. Even on its own it carries real strategic and commercial value for a board and leadership team, whatever you decide to do next.

We don't have a boarding school to partner with and showcase around the world so we look forward to talking to you about Glenalmond very much.

Best wishes as always,

Andrew
